The museum has a long tradition of presenting exhibitions on the architecture and design of the Swiss-born architect, who lived from 1887 to 1965. In 2013, the museum presented an exhibition on Le Corbusier's late works, including the Villa Savoye in Poissy and the Unité d'Habitation in Marseilles. The exhibition included a selection of his drawings, sketches, and models, as well as photographs and videos of his buildings. The museum also featured a video installation of Le Corbusier's films, including Chandigarh: The City of the Future and Building with Light.

Le Corbusier's work was characterized by a combination of modernist design and a concern for the spiritual and social aspects of architecture. He believed that architecture should be a form of worship, and that it should be designed to serve the needs of the community. He saw the architect as a gnostic figure, capable of unlocking the secrets of the cosmos and creating buildings that were in harmony with nature.

The museum's permanent collection includes over 10,000 works of art, including painting, sculpture, and photography. The collection is particularly strong in works by European artists, including毕加索,马蒂斯, and梵高. The museum also houses a large collection of prints and drawings, as well as a library of over 50,000 books and periodicals on art and design. The museum's exhibitions continue to attract large crowds, with over one million visitors annually.
